RELENTLESSLY THE RIVER ROLLS ON

CARRYING DISTRUCTION, DISEASE, DEATH IN ITS PATH

The Country Is Facing the Greatest Flood In Its History—The Cry of Humanity Will Be Answered and Assistance Will Go Forward To the Fair Southland—The Destitute Now Crowding Into the Large Cities—Red Cross Now Assisting In the Work of Rescue.

Twenty-three white women and children who sought refuge in a house at Winterville, at Mississippi, were swept to their death in the flood waters, said a definite report received Sunday by Major J. S. Allen of the engineer corps.

This increased the known deaths in this area to 29 and Major Allen said that a conservative estimate of the total drownings in the delta region was at least 200 with a possibility that the actual number would be considerably greater.

Voluntary military rule was put into effect Sunday with Major A. G. Paxton of the 178th Field Artillery, Mississippi National Guard, in command. The military and other organizations cooperating in relief work prepared to maintain camps for 10,000 people for the duration of the high water.

Six thousand Negroes are encamped on the levee and 4000 white people are quartered in hotels and other buildings in this flooded city. Kitchens have been erected on the concrete wharf. Food enough for the whole population is reported en route to the city and Red Cross officials stated that tents to house every one would be erected Monday. The plan now is to erect a tented city on the levee, which is 20 feet wide.

The city will extend for a distance of three miles or more.

Urgent warnings to the people in the territory south of Greenville to flee were issued Sunday by Major Allen. The head of the flood waters is now between 20 and 25 miles south of Greenville and has to travel only about 25 miles before joining the backwater from the Yazoo river north of Vicksburg.

With the flood waters three feet deep in Leland, Arcola and Hollandale, all southeast of Greenville, and constantly rising, thousands sought refuge on the levee of the Yazoo and Mississippi Valley railroad. The residents of the towns were forced to the second floors of their homes.

Attempts to rescue these marooned persons were made Sunday by Red Cross workers in motor boats. They had to fight a strong current and their task promised to be a heavy one since 3000 were in Leland and 1000 in Arcola.

Another thousand refugees were taken from Greenville Sunday to Vicksburg on the steamer Barrett. Included in this number were five hundred white women and children. This number will be replaced, however, by another thousand who are being brought from Vicksburg from Lake Lee, 12 miles south of here.

Of the ten thousand persons who are planning to remain in Greenville throughout the period of the flood, six thousand are Negroes.

Bateaux are being used as the only means of transportation about the city. It was evident to the authorities that many citizens were reluctant to leave their homes and business and preferred to take their chances in the flooded city.

Long lines of Negroes with their sleeves rolled up passed by health officers on the levee Sunday to receive typhoid serum. The serum was dropped on the roof of the court house from an airplane believed to have come from Memphis or Jackson. Sandwiches also were dropped from planes during the day.

A sabbath scene of death and desolation was presented for over more than 9000 square miles of the richest lands in Mississippi and Arkansas as the flood waters of half a dozen mighty streams continued their relentless flow to the sea.

At least 100 human lives have been snuffed out by the swirling, plunging waters since the river started tearing from their beds three weeks ago.

Disease continues to spread in the old concentration camps and was beginning to make its appearance in the ones in some parts of the Mississippi. Red Cross officials said after the relief work would come the problem of sanitation and health.

While federal authorities were extending all aid possible in all directions over the flooded area, the situation occupying the bulk of their attention was that at and around Greenville where thousands are marooned or from which refugees have been taken to Vicksburg and other points.

After a conference with Governor Murphy, of Mississippi, and Colonel Charles H. Danforth, air officer of the fourth corps area, with headquarters in Atlanta, Adjutant General Green issued a statement saying that 15,000 persons are marooned in various localities around Greenville.

These people in some cases have been without food and water for twenty-four hours or longer, the statement said, adding that unless many small boats and motor boats were furnished by the people of the country many human lives could not be saved.

HOLDUP.

Charles E. Fuller, of Portsmouth, who arrived in this city on a late traction car, seeking a friend who is employed by Sturm & Dillard, made a chance acquaintance with a colored man and asked if he knew where he could find his party. The colored man knew all about it and volunteered to show him the way to the camp. When he got his man in the dark near the home of O. G. Opphile, on South Scioto street, he asked what have you got on you, at the same time shoving a gun right close to his heart. The stranger handed him over $21, all he had. From the description given the police, Loney Tolles was placed under arrest as answering the description. He was identified by the stranger and was locked up for examination.

WOMAN KILLED WHEN HIT BY AUTOMOBILE

Mrs. Henry Brungs Run Down by Machine Driven by William Buskirk.

Another life was sacrificed Saturday evening, when the Ford car driven by William Buskirk, of Wayne township, run down an elderly couple, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Brungs, at Mound street, corner of Court. Mrs. Brungs succumbed to her injuries Sunday morning at 6 o'clock.

The distressing accident occurred at an hour when the traffic lights were not burning. Saturday nights they are supposed to be on until 11 o'clock and Night Sergeant Thomas McManamy says he turned them off at 11:20. Five minutes later, as Mr. and Mrs. Brungs were crossing Mound street a car going north on Court, whirled west on Mound street and struck them down. Mrs. Brungs was thrown a distance of more than twenty feet. Her shoulder blade was broken, she was injured at the base of the brain, her skull was fractured and she bled profusely from her mouth and ears. Mr. Brungs received a severe contusion of the right ankle and his left wrist was sprained badly, but he escaped serious injury.

The driver of the car was accompanied by his wife and two children. The family had been at the home of his brother-in-law, Dave Moore, in the south end of town. Mr. Buskirk claims he never saw the couple, until he ran into them.

Following the accident the police officers ordered him to the mayor's office where he was questioned by the mayor and later allowed to go to his home. He will have another examination at 9 o'clock Tuesday morning. Mr. Buskirk is a tenant on the Walter McDill farm in Wayne township and he bears a good reputation. He is an industrious young farmer.

Following the accident Mrs. Brungs was removed to her home on East Mill street. She failed to recover consciousness.

The deceased was born in this city June 18, 1857, and was a daughter of John and Sarah Weidlich. In 1876, she was married to David Beaver and to this union five children were born all of whom survive. Besides her husband, Henry Brungs, whom she married in October, 1926, two sons and three daughters are living. They are Walter Beaver, of Cleveland; Fremont Beaver, athletic director of the Y. M. C. A., Newark; Mrs. Harold Morner, of Hamilton; and Mrs. G. C. Pickens and Miss Lillie Beaver, of this city. Eight grandchildren and one great-grandchild are living. Of her immediate family, one sister is living, Mrs. Anna Grauel, of Springfield.

The deceased was a member of the Trinity Lutheran church.

The funeral services will be held from the church Tuesday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock. Rev. G. J. Troutman will officiate. Two favorite hymns of the deceased will be sung: "Face to Face," and "The Beautiful Isle of Somewhere." Interment in Forest cemetery.

Coöperative Egg Marketing Gaining

Three Million Cases Were Handled During 1925.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Approximately 3,000,000 cases of eggs, worth slightly more than $30,000,000, were marketed co-operatively in the United States in 1925 by farmers' egg and poultry marketing associations. This figure, compiled by the United States Department of Agriculture, compares with 2,400,000 cases, worth $22,000,000, handled co-operatively in 1924.

The department's estimates are based on reports from about 60 active egg and poultry associations. These associations are located in 21 states. Their business is believed to comprise most of the egg marketing done co-operatively in the country. A few associations failed to report the volume of their business to the department, but these are small concerns whose figures presumably would not greatly affect the total.

One of the California associations handled 752,070 cases of eggs last year. This was the largest quantity handled for any one co-operative concern. Two of the associations handled more than 500,000 cases each. The smallest volume of business reported by any one association for 1925 consisted of 585 cases of eggs, handled by a Minnesota organization. The reports showed that the delivery of a large number of cases of eggs per member is more important in determining the total volume of the associations' business than a large membership.

In connection with its egg marketing studies, the department has made an attempt to find out what amount of poultry is handled co-operatively in the United States. There is less information available about poultry marketing than about egg marketing. However, the department says a total of 12,928,057 pounds of live poultry was handled last year by 31 co-operative associations. Sixteen associations handling dressed poultry reported the marketing of 4,090,510 pounds in 1925.

Leading states in the co-operative marketing of live poultry were as follows: Missouri, 9,871,453 pounds; Minnesota, 1,827,131 pounds; Wisconsin, 208,733 pounds.

Kill All Garden Pests Before They Get Start

As crop insurance for Missouri gardeners in 1927, Leonard Haseman, entomologist at the Missouri College of Agriculture, urges every gardener to clean up all trash at the first opportunity.

After burning the trash to destroy all hibernating insects, plow the ground just as soon as the frost is out sufficiently to permit it. This will expose many more insects that live under ground. A later freeze is likely to kill them and will also improve the condition of the soil.

Very early in the spring, also, the war can be carried into the camp of the garden mole. In the earliest of his spring runs, while food is scarce, raisins or scraps of meat treated with strychnine will prevent a lot of later damage to lawn and garden.

All such early measures which reduce the numbers of insects and larger pests in advance of warm weather will prove very effective in preventing large increases in their numbers and reducing the difficulties of the busy gardening season.

Seed-Corn Maggot Also Pest of Seed Potatoes

Studies of the seed-corn maggot, which is also a pest of seed potatoes, lead the bureau of entomology to conclude that maggot attack normally follows seed-potato injury or decay. It has been found that the eggs of the adult fly are not as a rule deposited on freshly cut pieces of seed potato, even though these are left exposed in the field for several hours. The young maggots do not feed on healthy pieces of potato seed, but if decay is present the maggots enter these spots and develop without difficulty. Planting methods which tend to preserve the seed and prevent rotting or burning throughout the germination period will lessen injury by this insect.

Agricultural Notes

Don't be fooled by old corn. Test it

European Larch grows well on dry upland and it produces good posts and poles.

Nearly five million acres of land in New York produce hay and nearly four million acres produce maple sirup and maple sugar.

Efficient power on the farm only comes when the producer of the power is in the best possible shape—be it horses, tractor, truck or electricity.

New York's quota of forest trees to plant this year is thirty million. Last year twenty million were planted and the year before the total was ten million.

Correct packing by the shipper and careful handling by the transportation company can prevent all damage to eggs in transit except that caused by accidents.

AMERICA UNDER FIRE

The war film "America Under Fire," which was shown in February of this year for three nights at the Grand Theatre to capacity audiences under auspices of Howard Hall Post, American Legion, will return to this city, this time under auspices of the local venture of the 40 et 8, Monday and Tuesday, May 2nd and 3rd.

Corporal Ingleston who appears with the picture, advised local committees that 1,300 additional feet of film had been added to the picture since it was shown here and promises some real entertainment to those who have already seen the film. These pictures are the property of the United States War Department and Corp. Ingleston is permitted to show them, being one of the photographers under the direction of the War Department during the World War and knows every foot of his film by heart. He tells his story in the language of the doughboy and never fails to interest his audience.

At the previous showing the capacity of the theatre was taxed at every performance and the crowd that awaited the opening of the doors each night was proof in itself, of the popularity of this film.

There will be no need of the confusion that reigned at the last showing as the committees for this performance have arranged to reserve seats and thus avoid all unnecessary crowding.

FEDERAL IRE

Enormous Increase In Family-Made Intoxicants Looked Upon As "Serious."

Washington, April 22.—Federal "intervention" into home brewing, wine making and small distilling may become necessary as a result of an enormous increase in this method of producing intoxicants, it was learned at the treasury today.

While General L. C. Andrews, dry chief, has passed up the "little fellow" in the drive against big sources of liquor supply which have been keeping the bootleg market satisfied, officials admitted today that the question of home manufacture of intoxicants is looming as a serious problem.

Prohibition authorities have been informed that the consumption of wine in the United States last year amounted to 157,000,000 gallons, three times that before the Volstead act. The production of grapes has been mounting steadily, having been estimated at over 2,000,000 tons last year by the agricultural department.

The commercial bootleg market is reported to be suffering seriously from "home producers." Officials estimated that thousands of families throughout the country are "making their own" and that little of the home-produced stuff is going into the commercial bootleg traffic.

Fit of Hat Important, Asserts Paris Modiste

"The fit of a hat is quite as important as the fit of frock or suit," declares Madame Le Monnier, famous Paris modiste, in an interview published by the Woman's Home Companion. She explains:

"To pick up a hat from the milliner's table and walk out in it is probably more difficult than to find a ready-to-wear dress. While hats differ little in color, fabric or form for the young woman or the older one, their careful and becoming adjustment to the head is important.

"To be graceful, youthful and becoming, to say nothing of chic, a hat must sit down comfortably and, easily all around the head. It must fit so snugly that the sharpest, most sudden gust of wind cannot dislodge it. But at the same time it must not be so tight that the eyes seem to bulge or an ugly ridge is left on the forehead." Her final conclusion is that too large or too small a headsize in a hat is as unbecoming and dowdy as a baggy coat or one that fits too tightly.

England Makes Changes in Lingerie Fashions

There is a marked change in English lingerie fashions. The latest designs demand that before everything else "undies" should be feminine, even to the extent of the return of that much despised garment, the petticoat. Boudoir caps also are creeping back to favor. Yokes, which have so long been featured on frocks, are now seen on under things. Crepe de chine is a favorite material. Nightgowns are being made with square necks. Lace and scallops are used to get the "feminine" effect. Pink still retains its superiority as a favored color.

Fourreau Is Taking On Additional Importance

A good foundation underneath is what one must have nowadays to be well dressed. Consequently, the fourreau, or slip, is taking on additional importance. This is especially true since the vogue for fringe is growing steadily. Some of these dresses have the skirt entirely composed of long silk fringe, worn over a slip of a contrasting shade. One costume brought back from Paris by a Philadelphia society woman has both skirt and bodice entirely composed of silk fringe, separated by a broad waist and big band of satin embroidered in silver.

Color Combinations in Many Winsome Schemes

With the trend that placed a chiffon skirt over a costume slip in full swing, color combinations must become subjects of constant study. Designers have worked some charming compose effects. Some of these are navy blue and a lavender blue, navy and mauve pink, black and two shades of gray, black and a golden beige and black, Nile green and pearl gray.

Flounces

Flounces are among the most popular trimmings for daytime as well as evening dresses. Frequently they are the only adornments used on silk or volle frocks. The flounces are of the same material as the dress and are posed one above the other. There is a distinct tendency to fullness with the flounces lifted at the front.

"Interest"

A magazine article says that "there are a great many interesting things about the banking business." Among the most interesting is the interest.—Southern Lumberman.

"ANTEX" WINDOW SHADES Are Low in Price

But See the Quality for Yourself

You'll probably read advertisements that strongly urged you to buy the product advertised. This advertisement simply tells you what you can get in a window shade for 75 cents in 36 inch width (wider shades in proportion) during the introductory sale---or while our supply lasts. Judge the value for yourself!

If you have never seen "Antex" window shades, there's a surprise in store for you at our special "Antex" introductory sale.

"Antex" shades are the newest window shades on the market. They cannot crack or develop pinholes! The surface is non-porous and does not soil readily.

"Antex" shades have a beautiful crepe finish; they are made like felt, of long, strong fiber; they have no oil, paint, starch, clay or other coating to crack; the colors are commercially fast.

They can be boiled in hot water, or soaked in hot or cold water, and after drying, will stand every test just as though they had never been wet. If wrinkled, no holes appear, and a hot iron and damp cloth will remove the wrinkles; two strong men can play tug-of-war with them; they can be cleaned with a dry rubber sponge, with art gum, or with ordinary paper cleaner.

Try any test yourself. Satisfy yourself---but do so before our limited supply is gone.

The term "Red City," applied to Philadelphia, is probably due to the fact that red was the predominating color originally, many of the houses being built of red brick.

Somebody has written in to inquire how certain people in town make a living and seemed like they were hinting at the writer in particular. And personally we'll say that being busy with other things we've never put a great deal of thought on that subject and don't feel competent to discuss it at this writing.

Luther Newton, who has been working on the streets for the last week or two got a right hard fall yesterday when his shovel slipped out from under him.

Milton Hall meant to go on a fishing trip down on Willow creek today but postponed it on account of a lack of equipment. He's got a good outfit and he knows where it is, but so many things have been piled on top of it in the closet where he kept it, that he can't get up the heart to start digging for it.

Simon Sloan went up to the city last week to take an examination for a postoffice job. He came out thinking he had made a high grade, but since then he's found that he guessed wrong on the biggest part of the questions.

Mr. and Mrs. Emmett Tucker are entertaining Emmett's uncle from Polk county and they're having some trouble providing him a place where he can sleep. He's always been used to a big feather bed and can't seem to get adjusted to the mattress which Mrs. Tucker fixed for him. They heard him up the first night, and when they asked was anything wrong, he said there wasn't, only he had to get up to rest.

Mrs. Ed Thomas broke her string of beads in the Gem theater Saturday night at an exciting place in the picture and Ed had to keep a firm grip on his self control while he hunted around on the floor in the dark for the beads that spilled off.

Attorney Parks is scheduled to make a talk before the Woman's Discussion club next Wednesday on what the trouble in China is all about. But at this writing it looks like maybe he'll have to be sick or called out of town that day for he can't seem to learn what the difficulty is or why.

Mrs. Millie Hicks had to rush down to the telephone exchange yesterday to answer a long distance call from her married daughter that lives in the city. But by the time she got there the hurry and the excitement had taken her breath so that she couldn't talk until she calmed herself a while.

Sidney Moon gave one of his coats to old Cap Bowers last week on account of Cap was nearly out of anything to wear. And the first time Cap wore the coat outside he met Sidney's bull dog, and seemed like the dog recognized the coat, for he followed along and growled so that Cap had to go over and get Sidney to let the dog know it was all right.

Jeff Patton, who has the agency for a patent washing machine, gave out word recently that he'd demonstrate the machine by doing a washing for anybody that would call him and he got his hands full right away. But he stuck to it until some of the folks called him to come and demonstrate some more on their second week's washing, after which he changed his rules.

Some comment was made lately about how slow Henry Hunt talks and seems like he turns every word over a few times in his mind before he lets it out. And Uncle Bill Bobbitt remarked that if some others would slow down their talk and mingle in a little thought, why their conversation would carry more weight.

It's been noticed around town that two or three people who bought automobiles without thinking much in advance of the first payment, are now walking again.

SUFFERERS IN FLOOD AREA IN DIRE NEED

Necessity For Food and Clothing is Greatest in History of the Red Cross.

Over one hundred thousand persons are suffering property loss running into the millions from the devastation made by the worst flood, in the Mississippi valley, that his ever struck the United States. Hundreds are dead and thousands of others are facing death unless immediate relief is given by sending to the stricken territory food and clothing. The need for relief is the greatest ever experienced by the American Red Cross.

President Coolidge has issued a call to the American people to act quickly and generously.

In accordance with the proclamation of the president of the United States, I ask that our citizens assist by their donations in bringing relief to these Mississippi valley people. It is imperative that a large relief fund be raised immediately by our giving.

A committee, whose names appear below, will wait upon you Tuesday for your contribution to this worthy cause. The men soliciting are busy men, taking this time away from their own business, and all should receive them open heartedly and discharge them at once, so that the work will take as little time as possible. If you leave your place of business Tuesday leave a check filled out with the amount you want to give so the committee will not have to call a second time. Should the committee miss you and you want to give something toward furnishing food and clothing to these, our brothers, call either Miss Agnes R. Butch, secretary of the local branch of American Red Cross or Geo. M. Fitzpatrick, chairman (phone 263) and someone will be sent for your check.

Please make all checks payable to

The committees follow:

First Ward East—John Goeller Jr., George Forst and Wallace Crist.
 First Ward West—Harley Caldwell, Karl Hermann and W. F. Heffner.
 Second Ward—H. E. Betz, Charles Smith and Charles Miller.

Third Ward—Thos. F. Jeffries, John Drum and Harry Steinhauser.
 Fourth Ward—Charles T. Gilmore, T. O. Gilliland and Frank Kline Sr.
 Clark Will, of the Third National bank, is treasurer of the committee.

Geo. M. Fitzpatrick, Chairman
 Agnes R. Butch, Secretary.

RADIO SAVES LIVES OF CREW IN STORMReceives Warning, Then Cooks Meal for Men.

New York.—Capt. John Hall and six seamen from the three-masted schooner G. J. Cherry, wrecked off Cape Hatteras in the hurricane of March 2, attributes the fact that he and his crew were saved to two things: The first, a modern radio set with a metallic box and secondly, to 443,000 feet of lumber the ship was bringing from Charleston S. C., to New York.

Late in the day of March 1, Captain Hall, tuning in with the broadcast set he had purchased only last November, heard a storm warning from the Richmond Hill station WABC.

Richmond Hill was right, and the storm came with such violence that it opened the seams of the ship and for 13 days he and the crew clung desperately to the after deckhouse of a ship two-thirds submerged by water, diving to the lazaret in the after hatch for raw potatoes and catching fish with a hook improvised from the springs on the schooner's auxiliary gas engine, which was thrown overboard with every other removable object to keep the ship from going under. The lumber cargo kept the boat afloat. The radio set was quite forgotten in the struggle to keep alive!

Not Seen by Passing Ships.

The story of seven ships, sighted by the watch in the mizenmast cross trees, which passed without noticing the signals of distress during the 13 days until Captain Hall and his crew were at last picked up by the oil tanker Gulf Point, has been told, but the part a metal cabinet of the radio set played was merely suggested in the original accounts of the rescue.

The G. J. Cherry's galley was, of course, submerged and the raw potatoes salvaged and the fish caught had to be cooked, so Captain Hall, remembering the metal box, sent a negro sailor down to salvage it from his under-water cabin.

"Castro Bill," the ship's seventy-seven-year-old cook, and "the only American among the crew," according to Captain Hall, had a man dive into the schooner's galley for a grate from the stove.

It was easy to find fuel—there was a lumber cargo. They also had the food. What was needed now was a vessel to do the cooking in.

It may have hurt the new radio fan which the captain had turned into to tear out the coils, condensers, sockets and tubes from the metal frame of the receiver. But this was done, and soon the odor of sizzling sausages, 13 fish, and a few meager potatoes heartened the crew again.

"So even after the storm warning we used the set," explained "Castro Bill."

Potatoes Gave Out.

On the eighth day adrift the potatoes gave out and the fish would no longer bite, and "Castro Bill" took to light cooking—four sausages a day for seven men.

It was a bad day all around. The fourth steamer had passed within five miles without sighting them, and the crew voted six to one against the captain to take to the single lifeboat the G. J. Cherry carried.

"Three hundred miles to land," said the captain, "and they wanted to row it. Childish. Would have been suicide."

"Why didn't they mutiny?" he was asked.

"Well, I persuaded them, I guess," said the weatherbeaten "old man" of the ship, who has been a master of sailing vessels for 35 years.

Kentucky Town ClaimsThree Singing Mice

Mayfield, Ky.—Mayfield claims three singing mice. Oscar Boaz reports he has heard one of these rodents about his house which makes a noise not unlike a "sort of song," Henry Singleton is accredited with catching one of these "singing" mice a few months ago, and another has been heard giving its merry lay about his premises recently.

On the other hand, while these musical mice are sought as curiosities, reports are sent out from the Kentucky agricultural experiment station of injury by mice to fruit trees, loss running rather high in various parts of the state. One orchard owner reported the loss of 75 fourteen-year-old trees, and fruit growers in practically every section of the state have suffered losses from ravages of mice.

High water in lowlands caused mice to migrate to higher grounds, with the result that many orchards have suffered exceptionally large mouse injury this year, according to W. W. Magill, extension field agent of the college of agriculture. The flood waters destroyed the natural source of stored feed for the mice and forced them to eat bark of the fruit trees, according to Magill.

Lack of Hospitality
Toward "Poteen" King

Accused of manufacturing "poteen," the famous Irish moonshine, the king of the bootleggers of the Galway region was sentenced recently to pay a fine of $50 or spend three months in the jail. On the day appointed for his choice he appeared at the gates of the prison and announced that he would serve his time, as he was unable to pay the fine.

He had not, however, complied with the rule of the prison to provide himself with a police escort and a committal warrant. Admittance to the prison was refused. The following day he again applied for admission. With the same result. Vowing that he would pay off the fine by distributing more of his troublesome "poteen," he turned away from the inhospitable prison and went back to Connemara.

Fruits With Meats and Vegetables

ON appetite depends the usefulness of every meal we eat—say our greatest dieticians. Fruit awakens the appetite. Its lovely color and fragrance are far more than a passing pleasure. They are essential, since our ability to absorb properly much of the food we eat depends on our quota of fruit. The present vogue is for fruits with meats and vegetables. Halves of large peaches and pears, slices of Hawaiian pineapple slightly sautéed, served with meats, and such vegetable dishes as pineapple with egg plant and scalloped sweet potatoes and apples have made their appearance in the dining rooms of famous hotels.

And since canned fruit is available at all seasons, since it is now packed with the flavor and health-giving properties of fresh-ripened fruit, and because it is economical, it is widely used in these new dishes. Hawaiian pineapple is not only a tart and savory addition to meat, but its juices have been recommended by physicians as a special aid in the digestion of meats. Crushed pineapple is effectively used as a meat sauce, just as apple or cranberry sauce is used with meat. Bartlett pears, packed in a syrup that preserves their delicacy, aroma and flavor, are especially good with meats and fish.

First American Flags
Displayed in Warfare

It is perhaps little known that the first American flag displayed "at sea" was raised by Colonel Wynkoop, commander of the Royal Savage, one of Benedict Arnold's little fleet in Lake Champlain, in 1776. This flag was a replica of the first striped flag, hoisted over Washington's headquarters at Cambridge. It consisted of thirteen alternate red and white stripes in the field and retained the colors of England, the united crosses of St. George and St. Andrew on a blue ground, in the canton. This flag was known in England as "The Rebellious Stripes."

"A picturesque incident is told of the first Stars and Stripes used in a military engagement," said Mr. Ames, foremost flag manufacturer in the country. "The Revolutionary flag of thirteen stripes with a circle of thirteen stars was adopted by the Continental congress on June 14, 1777, but the statute was not officially promulgated until the third of the following September. Meanwhile a copy of an Albany newspaper describing the flag had fallen under the eye of a Continental officer from Massachusetts on his way with reinforcements to Fort Schuyler, formerly Fort Stanwix, where the city of Rome, N. Y., now stands.

"He arrived at 5 p. m. on August 2, and very opportunely, too, as it turned out. For the British attacked the fort the following morning, which was Sunday. Before the end of the day the garrison had run up the first American battle flag. White stripes from shirts and hospital bandages alternated with red stripes made from the scarlet petticoat of a soldier's wife. A blue canton was improvised from the military coat of one Capt. Abraham Swartout, who, a year later, wrote to the commander of the fort requesting 'an order on the commissary to supply me, as promised, with eight yards of broadcloth in lieu of my blue coat which was used for colors at Fort Schuyler.'"—Everybody's Magazine.

HIGHEST LEVEL

In Constructions Costs For Two Years Was Reached in March, 1927.

Washington, April 23.—Construction costs rose during March, reaching the highest level they have occupied in two years. The average of these costs last month was slightly more than twice as great as the average registered in 1913, according to statistics compiled by the Associated General Contractors of America.

March was the third successive month to witness an increase. The latest rise was the most definite upward movement noted within any single month since early in 1923.

The increase is ascribed to higher prices of the basic construction materials. The average of material prices last month was the greatest since July, 1925.

The average of wages paid by contractors in the principal construction centers of the country during March showed no change from the figure recorded for February, when a slight rise over the January average was noted.

Gauged by a scale which places the 1913 average at 100 as its basis, construction costs as a whole reached the 201 level in March. At no time during the nineteen preceding months had the 200 mark been topped.

Last month's average was four points above the figure recorded for March, 1926. It was virtually equal to the March, 1925, average.

Sells Anything From Cougars to Grizzlies

Morton, Wash.—Any grizzly bears today, or would you like a real live cougar, bobcat or soft-eyed black-tailed deer? Small game, birds of any kind always on hand. Thus does Victor Winner—well named for his adopted job—advertise his wares about the country.

Winner lives on the south slope of Mount Rainier, where long protection has tamed the wild animals and birds until a little coaxing and offer of food is the lure to get them within the deceptive trap. He supplies many zoos and private parks with wild life specimens each year only by going out into his back lot and holding communion with the denizens of the forests.

Winner is a product of the early pioneer days when he trapped, herded cattle and prospected for gold. He declares tourists are gradually taming wild animals by scattering food here and there as they camp. The wild life learns to seek the human travelers, knowing something tasty is liable to remain for their benefit.

Men's Hair Long

Bobbed hair and truncated tresses may be popular in America and Europe, but the mode has not penetrated Asiatic Russia. Even the men in some parts of Turkestan wear long hair. In the "Heavenly Mountains" of Turkestan the Kalmucks, who are pure Buddhists, wear their hair in long, thick braids. They live in felt tents, eat mutton and drink "dumiss." Baldness is practically unknown among them.

AN EXCELLENT
EATIN' PLACE

John W. Lamparter, who before Prohibition became effective, was a well known and highly respected boniface, for a number of years in Circleville, has secured a position as cashier at Harvey's "Extraordinary" Good Things to Eat, located at 18-24 East Lynn street, Columbus, of which his son, John M. Lamparter is one of the partners. Harvey's serve Toasted sandwiches, Mexican Chili, Spaghetti, Steaks, Fish, Chops and Waffles, "like your mother used to make." Harvey's is the first street north of Broad and east of High and is enjoying a "land-office" business. Circleville people will always find a warm welcome at Harvey's. The service is excellent and the cooking par excellent. "If it were not so we would not tell you so."

Interesting Experiments

We did not believe, until we saw it tried, that a piece of writing paper, bent in basin shape, filled with water and held in the flame of a candle, will not burn, while the water will boil. Try it and see. You might also bend the edges of a piece of cardboard so as to make a small tray; cover the tray with shot and hold over a lamp. The shot will melt but the cardboard will not burn.—Farm Journal.

Deadly Disease Spreader

The common housefly is found in practically every portion of the globe. They deposit their eggs upon some putrefying matter, and the larvae are hatched under favorable conditions within 24 hours, and become full-grown within three or four weeks. The common housefly is a most dangerous agent in the spread of disease.

RAILROAD RIGHT OF WAY IS HIVE OF BUSY WORKERS

Construction Has Been a Race With Time, Weather And Floods As the Whirr And Clank of Machinery Has Told of the Energy Being Expended on Ohio's Major Piece of Railroad Building—Chesapeake & Ohio Expects To Be In Operation In This City In September.

Ohio's only major piece of railroad building is now being rushed toward completion in the southeastern portion of the state, between Gregg and thru this city to Valley Crossing, a distance of sixty-three miles.

At many places, gangs of workmen are employed in the construction of a double track railroad which is to bridge the gap between the Chesapeake & Ohio railway, on the south, and its subsidiary, property, the Hocking Valley, on the north.

Since last November, when the work was started, it has been a race between time, weather and floods, and, now, with the advent of milder weather, the new roadway begins to take tangible form all along the countryside. Before the end of September, according to the schedule formulated for this work, the new road will be ready for operation, and once again, the many small agricultural villages that have been alive with the tramp of two thousand workers, the whirr and clank of machinery and the rumble of huge caterpillar tractors, will resume their wonted peacefulness.

For a number of years, despite increasing demand of its own traffic, the Norfolk & Western has permitted use of its rails between Waverly and Valley Crossing for accommodation of the heavy interchange movement between the C. & O. and the Hocking Valley. The new construction, therefore, is expected not only to facilitate the C. & O. and Hocking Valley interchange, but also to ease the situation for the N. & W. which urgently requires exclusive use of its rails for its own large traffic.

In the interest of speedy completion of the new link, the crews of seven general contractors have been distributed in eight sections throughout the area of construction, which is dotted with field camps for housing and feeding employees. The latter are working on ten hour shifts, day and night. Included in the mobile equipment of the contractors are 58 steam shovels, 63 locomotives and 533 railroad cars.

This machinery rolls into new location daily in the van of the bridge builders and track layers, who have before them the task of excavating 5,500,000 yards of dirt and rock, erecting 18,500,000 pounds of structural steel, of pouring 120,000 cubic yards of concrete, and laying 400,000 ties and 20,000 tons of the heaviest type of steel rail. In preparation for actual laying of track and finishing of bridges, 50 concrete plants have been established and five material yards have been situated at convenient points along the route.

This railroad link, when completed, will give the C. & O. and Hocking Valley resemble in outline an easy roadway between the Atlantic seaboard on the one hand and the Great Lakes on the other. Pictured on the map, along with this connecting line of road, the C. & O. and Hocking Valley resemble in outline and easy curving "L," extending almost due south from Toledo to the Ohio river and thence eastward to Hampton Roads.

Engineers point out that this Gregg-Valley Crossing route is not only one of directness, but is one of low grades and easy curvatures. At no point over the 63 miles of roadway will there be a grade exceeding five-tenths percent against the eastbound or empty movement, while the ruling grade against loaded traffic will be two-tenths per cent. Indeed, the grade is hardly perceptible to the eye.

There will be no grade crossings, since the new roadway passes under or over intersecting highways and railways.

Generally following a water level grade, the route runs between the Scioto river on the west and a low range of foothills on the east. It skirts the so-called "valley of floods," and, at all times, will be above the spring flood levels. The country thru which the new line is being built is old Indian territory. The Scioto tribes had villages there and cultivated the soil after their primitive fashion. Early white settlers took up the work in a more scientific manner and thru succeeding generations this locality has been known as "Ohio's Garden Spot," because of the character of the agricultural development there.

Toward the southern end of the construction, there looms to the east Mount Logan, under the shadow of which "The Great Seal of the State of Ohio" was fashioned in 1803.

The Great Seal of the State of Ohio has been altered several times since its introduction in 1803 when Governor Tiffin visioned "the sun rising on a new state." The original setting of this seal is now undergoing a change. The latest designers are not artists wielding palette and brush, but railway construction engineers directing transit and level along the foothills of Mount Logan, which is the central feature of Ohio's official emblem.

"Down-staters" watching progress of the building of this railroad have noted the coincidental location of the line across the countryside depicted in the state seal. They point to the new line as imparting a modern note to this rural setting and as bringing transportation into the picture, where it ought to be, in the foreground, along with agriculture, which is represented on the seal by a sheaf of wheat. The new line of road represents the largest railroad construction in Ohio during a period of a decade or so.

ated for several miles, but Gilleran drove his dog team all night and passed the bus unnoticed in the darkness.

When his dog team tired as a result of being pushed to the limit, Gilleran halted 28 miles from his destination and sent the team back. He covered the remaining distance on foot.

On arrival at the site of the claims Gilleran staked them in his name and started back to Winnipeg to record them. On the return trip he met Todd and his party, who thought they had left him far behind. Disgusted at being bested in a race he thought he had won by a wide margin, Todd concealed his chagrin and congratulated the winner.

Wanted to Be Asked Once More

By H. LOUIS RAYBOLD

(Copyright.)

IT IS not very pleasant to be the only girl in your crowd that isn't either married or engaged. Marion Gray sometimes felt philosophical about the matter when she looked about her and saw the sort of husbands, present or prospective, which her friends had chosen. She herself could have had Jack Rogers any day if she had not preferred to wait for a taller, handsomer, richer man.

It isn't to be wondered at that Marion read with great interest the following item in the Brainerd Sun:

"We hear that the new building on the corner of Main and Winter streets has been leased to the firm of Caldwell & Scobie, rising young architects, who will live, we understand, at Mrs. Weatherby's, so it seemed a foregone conclusion that there were two young bachelors coming to town. And as Mrs. Weatherby lived just across the street, Marion could not help but see them occasionally.

She saw them—from a distance—the very night they arrived. Both were presentable enough, but young Caldwell seemed to be the better looking. He walked with an air and his clothes were the last word in cut, crease and color.

In the days which followed, the small town of Brainerd fairly laid itself out to please the newcomers. They got considerable business and a great deal of entertainment. There were even those who said it was ridiculous the way people fell all over two ordinary fellows.

"Personally," said Jack Rogers one evening to Marion as they set on the upper veranda step watching the moon rise—or at least Jack thought that was why they were sitting there. "I'm suspicious of people who come from goodness knows where. For all we know, they may be a couple of crooks!"

Marion almost choked with indignation. "You're absurd, Jack!" she cried.

"Especially that Caldwell guy," grumbled Jack. "Isn't he the mama's boy! And there he is now, swinging his cane! And, by gosh, I do believe he's coming here!"

If Jack could only have known how big a favor his departure would have been to Marion, he would not have known whether to please her by going or punish her by staying.

As it was, he withdrew into a shell of reserve and heard Marion putting herself out to be agreeable to a stranger as she had never exerted herself to be agreeable to him.

And while he watched and listened, he evolved a scheme whereby, if Caldwell & Scobie were crooks, the fact should be uncovered. Nor is it going too far to say that he devoutly hoped they would indeed prove to be crooks. He had long been in love with Marion and was quite ready to go to any lengths to win her.

Before young Caldwell was even thinking of going home, Jack had risen and bade both of them a cool good night.

On the following morning Marion heard from various sources that Jack had left town, although he seemed to have told no one where he was going. For the first time in her life Marion's thoughts concerned themselves with his whereabouts.

A week passed and he did not return. During his absence Marion was frequently seen with Caldwell and her crowd got considerable kick out of wondering if he were really in love with her.

Marion herself wondered, too. She felt that she would say "yes," if he did ask her to marry him. Strangely, however, Jack with his mysterious absence had done more to advance his interests than he ever had with his presence. There were actually moments when Marion found herself weighing the two men and thinking that the scales tipped very little one way or the other.

Two weeks later Jack returned, as quietly as he had gone away.

He went straight to Marion. And had he not felt so miserable himself, he might have noticed that she looked—well, different, somehow.

As it was, he sank down in the couch hammock beside her and waited a moment, as if wondering just how to put what he was about to say.

Then, "I suppose I might as well get it off my chest," he began. "I've been tracing this Caldwell & Scobie firm from one town to another. They've certainly been around a lot. But I had no luck. That is—well, you see, if you were going to marry young Caldwell, I wanted to make sure before hand he was all straight and would make you happy. And I guess he is. Couldn't find a thing about either of them that wasn't O. K. So, if you love him, that's all there is to it."

Marion folded her slender hands about her knees. "That was kind of you, Jack," she said with a smile. "But you needn't have bothered. Mr. Caldwell told me last night he's engaged to Doris Scobie, his partner's sister."

Jack sighed with tremendous relief. "Thank heaven," he said. "Then we're just where we were before."

"Are we?" asked Marion with a laugh. "Oh, Jack, you old faithful, ask me to marry you just once more!"

RELENTLESSLY THE RIVER ROLLS ON

CARRYING DISTRUCTION, DISEASE, DEATH IN ITS PATH

The Country Is Facing the Greatest Flood In Its History—The Cry of Humanity Will Be Answered and Assistance Will Go Forward To the Fair Southland—The Destitute Now Crowding Into the Large Cities—Red Cross Now Assisting In the Work of Rescue.

Twenty-three white women and children who sought refuge in a house at Winterville, at Mississippi, were swept to their death in the flood waters, said a definite report received Sunday by Major J. S. Allen of the engineer corps.

This increased the known deaths in this area to 29 and Major Allen said that a conservative estimate of the total drownings in the delta region was at least 200 with a possibility that the actual number would be considerably greater.

Voluntary military rule was put into effect Sunday with Major A. G. Paxton of the 178th Field Artillery, Mississippi National Guard, in command. The military and other organizations cooperating in relief work prepared to maintain camps for 10,000 people for the duration of the high water.

Six thousand Negroes are encamped on the levee and 4000 white people are quartered in hotels and other buildings in this flooded city. Kitchens have been erected on the concrete wharf. Food enough for the whole population is reported en route to the city and Red Cross officials stated that tents to house every one would be erected Monday. The plan now is to erect a tented city on the levee, which is 20 feet wide.

The city will extend for a distance of three miles or more.

Urgent warnings to the people in the territory south of Greenville to flee were issued Sunday by Major Allen. The head of the flood waters is now between 20 and 25 miles south of Greenville and has to travel only about 25 miles before joining the backwater from the Yazoo river north of Vicksburg.

With the flood waters three feet deep in Leland, Arcola and Hollandale, all southeast of Greenville, and constantly rising, thousands sought refuge on the levee of the Yazoo and Mississippi Valley railroad. The residents of the towns were forced to the second floors of their homes.

Attempts to rescue these marooned persons were made Sunday by Red Cross workers in motor boats. They had to fight a strong current and their task promised to be a heavy one since 3000 were in Leland and 1000 in Arcola.

Another thousand refugees were taken from Greenville Sunday to Vicksburg on the steamer Barrett. Included in this number were five hundred white women and children. This number will be replaced, however, by another thousand who are being brought from Vicksburg from Lake Lee, 12 miles south of here.

Of the ten thousand persons who are planning to remain in Greenville thruout the period of the flood, six thousand are Negroes.

Bateaux are being used as the only means of transportation about the city. It was evident to the authorities that many citizens were reluctant to leave their homes and business and preferred to take their chances in the flooded city.

Long lines of Negroes with their sleeves rolled up passed by health officers on the levee Sunday to receive typhoid serum. The serum was dropped on the roof of the court house from an airplane believed to have come from Memphis or Jackson.

Sandwiches also were dropped from planes during the day.

A sabbath scene of death and desolation was presented for over more than 9000 square miles of the richest lands in Mississippi and Arkansas as the flood waters of half a dozen mighty streams continued their relentless flow to the sea.

At least 100 human lives have been snuffed out by the swirling, plunging waters since the river started tearing from their beds three weeks ago.

Disease continues to spread in the old concentration camps and was beginning to make its appearance in the ones in some parts of the Mississippi. Red Cross officials said after the relief work would come the problem of sanitation and health.

While federal authorities were extending all aid possible in all directions over the flooded area, the situation occupying the bulk of their attention was that at and around Greenville where thousands are marooned or from which refugees have been taken to Vicksburg and other points.

After a conference with Governor Murphree, of Mississippi, and Colonel Charles H. Danforth, air officer of the fourth corps area, with headquarters in Atlanta, Adjutant General Green issued a statement saying that 15,000 persons are marooned in various localities around Greenville.

These people in some cases have been without food and water for twenty-four hours or longer, the statement said, adding that unless many small boats and motor boats were furnished by the people of the country many human lives could not be saved.

The Arkansas diamond mine in Pike county has produced several thousand diamonds equal in color to the best produced in other parts of the world and 1 per cent. harder than the hardest from other parts of the world.

Diamonds Long Valued.

Previous to the discovery of the Brazilian mines in 1727, diamonds were found chiefly in India and Borneo. They had been used as a gem from very early times.

DIED SUDDENLY

Mrs. Ella Waldren Passed Away at Her Home in Columbus Monday Morning.

Mrs. Ella Waldren, wife of Thomas Waldren died suddenly Monday morning at her home, 896 Miller avenue, Columbus, aged 63 years of heart trouble.

Besides her husband she leaves four daughters and one son. They are Mrs. Pearl Matzler, of Cleveland; Mrs. Alwilda Berger, of Illinois; Edward Jones, of Cleveland and Mrs. Lydia Boda and Arthur Waldren, of Columbus. Of her immediate family two brothers are living. They are Grant A. Rowe and John W. Rowe, of this city.

The deceased was born in Hocking county and was a daughter of Francis Marion and Eliza Fling Rowe.

PERSONALS

James Roby and William See were business visitors in Columbus today.

Mrs. Fred Martin and Miss Frances Barnes spent the day in Columbus.

Mrs. C. A. Kadle and Mrs. Henry Sherman were visitors in Columbus Monday.

C. E. Brown, of Cornell, Illinois, who has been visiting his uncle, H. H. Brown, of East Ringgold, has returned home.

Mr. and Mrs. George Hutton and daughter, Phyllis, of Frankfort, were Sunday guests of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Brown.

HOLDUP.

Charles E. Fuller, of Portsmouth, who arrived in this city on a late traction car, seeking a friend who is employed by Sturmn & Dillard, made a chance acquaintance with a colored man and asked if he knew where he could find his party. The colored man knew all about it and volunteered to show him the way to the camp. When he got his man in the dark near the home of O. G. Opphile, on South Scioto street, he asked what have you got on you, at the same time shoving a gun right close to his heart. The stranger handed him over $21, all he had. From the description given the police, Loney Tolles was placed under arrest as answering the description. He was identified by the stranger and was locked up for examination.

WOMAN KILLED WHEN HIT BY AUTOMOBILE

Mrs. Henry Brungs Run Down by Machine Driven by William Buskirk.

Another life was sacrificed Saturday evening, when the Ford car driven by William Buskirk, of Wayne township, run down an elderly couple, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Brungs, at Mound street, corner of Court. Mrs. Brungs succumbed to her injuries Sunday morning at 6 o'clock.

The distressing accident occurred at an hour when the traffic lights were not burning. Saturday nights they are supposed to be on until 11 o'clock and Night Sergeant Thomas McManamy says he turned them off at 11:20. Five minutes later, as Mr. and Mrs. Brungs were crossing Mound street a car going north on Court, whirled west on Mound street and struck them down. Mrs. Brungs was thrown a distance of more than twenty feet. Her shoulder blade was broken, she was injured at the base of the brain, her skull was fractured and she bled profusely from her mouth and ears. Mr. Brungs received a severe contusion of the right ankle and his left wrist was sprained badly, but he escaped serious injury.

The driver of the car was accompanied by his wife and two children. The family had been at the home of his brother-in-law, Dave Moore, in the south end of town. Mr. Buskirk claims he never saw the couple, until he ran into them.

Following the accident the police officers ordered him to the mayor's office where he was questioned by the mayor and later allowed to go to his home. He will have another examination at 9 o'clock Tuesday morning. Mr. Buskirk is a tenant on the Walter McDill farm in Wayne township and he bears a good reputation. He is an industrious young farmer.

Following the accident Mrs. Brungs was removed to her home on East Mill street. She failed to recover consciousness.

The deceased was born in this city June 18, 1857, and was a daughter of John and Sarah Weidlich. In 1876, she was married to David Beaver and to this union five children were born all of whom survive. Besides her husband, Henry Brungs, whom she married in October, 1926, two sons and three daughters are living. They are Walter Beaver, of Cleveland; Fremont Beaver, athletic director of the Y. M. C. A., Newark; Mrs. Harold Morner, of Hamilton; and Mrs. G. C. Pickens and Miss Lillie Beaver, of this city. Eight grandchildren and one great-grandchild are living. Of her immediate family, one sister is living, Mrs. Anna Grauel, of Springfield.

The deceased was a member of the Trinity Lutheran church.

The funeral services will be held from the church Tuesday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock. Rev. G. J. Troutman will officiate. Two favorite hymns of the deceased will be sung: "Face to Face," and "The Beautiful Isle of Somewhere." Interment in Forest cemetery.

Coöperative Egg Marketing Gaining

Three Million Cases Were Handled During 1925.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Approximately 3,000,000 cases of eggs, worth slightly more than $30,000,000, were marketed co-operatively in the United States in 1925 by farmers' egg and poultry marketing associations. This figure, compiled by the United States Department of Agriculture, compares with 2,400,000 cases, worth $22,000,000, handled co-operatively in 1924.

The department's estimates are based on reports from about 60 active egg and poultry associations. These associations are located in 21 states. Their business is believed to comprise most of the egg marketing done co-operatively in the country. A few associations failed to report the volume of their business to the department, but these are small concerns whose figures presumably would not greatly affect the total.

One of the California associations handled 782,070 cases of eggs last year. This was the largest quantity handled for any one co-operative concern. Two of the associations handled more than 500,000 cases each. The smallest volume of business reported by any one association for 1925 consisted of 585 cases of eggs, handled by a Minnesota organization. The reports showed that the delivery of a large number of cases of eggs per member is more important in determining the total volume of the associations' business than a large membership.

In connection with its egg marketing studies, the department has made an attempt to find out what amount of poultry is handled co-operatively in the United States. There is less information available about poultry marketing than about egg marketing. However, the department says a total of 12,328,057 pounds of live poultry was handled last year by 31 co-operative associations. Sixteen associations handling dressed poultry reported the marketing of 4,090,510 pounds in 1925.

Leading states in the co-operative marketing of live poultry were as follows: Missouri, 9,871,453 pounds; Minnesota, 1,827,131 pounds; Wisconsin, 208,735 pounds.

Kill All Garden Pests Before They Get Start

As crop insurance for Missouri gardens in 1927, Leonard Haseman, entomologist at the Missouri College of Agriculture, urges every gardener to clean up all trash at the first opportunity.

After burning the trash to destroy all hibernating insects, plow the ground just as soon as the frost is out sufficiently to permit it. This will expose many more insects that live under ground. A later freeze is likely to kill them and will also improve the condition of the soil.

Very early in the spring, also, the war can be carried into the camp of the garden mole. In the earliest of his spring runs, while food is scarce, raisins or scraps of meat treated with strychnine will prevent a lot of later damage to lawn and garden.

All such early measures which reduce the numbers of insects and larger pests in advance of warm weather will prove very effective in preventing large increases in their numbers and reducing the difficulties of the busy gardening season.

Seed-Corn Maggot Also Pest of Seed Potatoes

Studies of the seen-corn maggot, which is also a pest of seed potatoes, lead the bureau of entomology to conclude that maggot attack normally follows seed-potato injury or decay. It has been found that the eggs of the adult fly are not as a rule deposited on freshly cut pieces of seed potato, even though these are left exposed in the field for several hours. The young maggots do not feed on healthy pieces of potato seed, but if decay is present the maggots enter these spots and develop without difficulty. Planting methods which tend to preserve the seed and prevent rotting or burning throughout the germination period will lessen injury by this insect.

Agricultural Notes

Don't be fooled by old corn. Test it

European Larch grows well on dry upland and it produces good posts and poles.

Nearly five million acres of land in New York produce hay and nearly four million acres produce maple sirup and maple sugar.

Efficient power on the farm only comes when the producer of the power is in the best possible shape—he it horses, tractor, truck or electricity.

New York's quota of forest trees to plant this year is thirty million. Last year twenty million were planted and the year before the total was ten million.

Correct packing by the shipper and careful handling by the transportation company can prevent all damage to eggs in transit except that caused by accidents.

AMERICA UNDER FIRE

The war film "America Under Fire," which was shown in February of this year for three nights at the Grand Theatre to capacity audiences under auspices of Howard Hall Post, American Legion, will return to this city, this time under auspices of the local voiture of the 40 et 8, Monday and Tuesday, May 2nd and 3rd.

Corporal Ingleston who appears with the picture, advised local committees that 1,300 additional feet of film had been added to the picture since it was shown here and promises some real entertainment to those who have already seen the film. These pictures are the property of the United States War Department and Corp. Ingleston is permitted to show them, being one of the photographers under the direction of the War Department during the World War and knows every foot of his film by heart. He tells his story in the language of the doughboy and never fails to interest his audience.

At the previous showing the capacity of the theatre was taxed at every performance and the crowd that awaited the opening of the doors each night was proof in itself, of the popularity of this film.

There will be no need of the confusion that reigned at the last showing as the committees for this performance have arranged to reserve seats and thus avoid all unnecessary crowding.

HOME BREWING LIKELY TO FEEL FEDERAL IRE

Enormous Increase In Family-Made Intoxicants Looked Upon As "Serious."

Washington, April 22.—Federal "intervention" into home brewing, wine making and small distilling may become necessary as a result of an enormous increase in this method of producing intoxicants, in was learned at the treasury today.

While General L. C. Andrews, dry chief, has passed up the "little fellow" in the drive against big sources of liquor supply which have been keeping the bootleg market satisfied, officials admitted today that the question of home manufacture of intoxicants is looming as a serious problem.

Prohibition authorities have been informed that the consumption of wine in the United States last year amounted to 157,000,000 gallons, three times that before the Volstead act. The production of grapes has been mounting steadily, having been estimated at over 2,000,000 tons last year by the agricultural department.

The commercial bootleg market is reported to be suffering seriously from "home producers." Officials estimated that thousands of families throughout the country are "making their own" and that little of the home-produced stuff is going into the commercial bootleg traffic.

"ANTEX" WINDOW SHADES Are Low in Price

But See the Quality for Yourself

You'll probably read advertisements that strongly urged you to buy the product advertised. This advertisement simply tells you what you can get in a window shade for 75 cents in 36 inch width (wider shades in proportion) during the introductory sale—or while our supply lasts. Judge the value for yourself!

If you have never seen "Antex" window shades, there's a surprise in store for you at our special "Antex" introductory sale.

"Antex" shades are the newest window shades on the market. They cannot crack or develop pinholes! The surface is non-porous and does not soil readily.

"Antex" shades have a beautiful crepe finish; they are made like felt, of long, strong fiber; they have no oil, paint, starch, clay or other coating to crack; the colors are commercially fast.

They can be boiled in hot water, or soaked in hot or cold water, and after drying, will stand every test just as though they had never been wet. If wrinkled, no holes appear, and a hot iron and damp cloth will remove the wrinkles; two strong men can play tug-of-war with them; they can be cleaned with a dry rubber sponge, with art gum, or with ordinary paper cleaner.

Try any test yourself. Satisfy yourself—but do so before our limited supply is gone.

Fit of Hat Important, Asserts Paris Modiste

"The fit of a hat is quite as important as the fit of frock or suit," declares Madame Le Monnier, famous Paris modiste, in an interview published by the Woman's Home Companion. She explains:

"To pick up a hat from the milliner's table and walk out in it is probably more difficult than to find a ready-to-wear dress. While hats differ little in color, fabric or form for the young woman or the older one, their careful and becoming adjustment to the head is important.

"To be graceful, youthful and becoming, to say nothing of chic, a hat must sit down comfortably and, easily all around the head. It must fit so snugly that the sharpest, most sudden gust of wind cannot dislodge it. But at the same time it must not be so tight that the eyes seem to bulge or an ugly ridge is left on the forehead."

Her final conclusion is that too large or too small a headsize in a hat is as unbecoming and dowdy as a baggy coat or one that fits too tightly.

England Makes Changes in Lingerie Fashions

There is a marked change in English lingerie fashions. The latest designs demand that before everything else "undies" should be feminine, even to the extent of the return of that much despised garment, the petticoat. Boudoir caps also are creeping back to favor. Yokes, which have so long been featured on frocks, are now seen on under things. Crepe de chine is a favorite material. Nightgowns are being made with square necks. Lace and scallops are used to get the "feminine" effect. Pink still retains its superiority as a favored color.

Fourreau Is Taking On Additional Importance

A good foundation underneath is what one must have nowadays to be well dressed. Consequently, the fourreau, or slip, is taking on additional importance. This is especially true since the vogue for fringe is growing steadily. Some of these dresses have the skirt entirely composed of long silk fringe, worn over a slip of a contrasting shade. One costume brought back from Paris by a Philadelphia society woman has both skirt and bodice entirely composed of silk fringe, separated by a broad waist and big band of satin embroidered in silver.

Color Combinations in Many Winsome Schemes

With the trend that placed a chiffon skirt over a costume slip in full swing, color combinations must become subjects of constant study. Designers have worked some charming compose effects. Some of these are navy blue and a lavender blue, navy and mauve pink, black and two shades of gray, black and a golden beige and black, Nile green and pearl gray.

Flounces

Flounces are among the most popular trimmings for daytime as well as evening dresses. Frequently they are the only adornments used on silk or voile frocks. The flounces are of the same material as the dress and are posed one above the other. There is a distinct tendency to fullness with the flounces lifted at the front.

of equipment. He's got a good outfit and he knows where it is, but so many things have been piled on top of it in the closet where he kept it, that he can't get up the heart to start digging for it.

Simon Sloan went up to the city last week to take an examination for a postoffice job. He came out thinking he had made a high grade, but since then he's found that he guessed wrong on the biggest part of the questions.

Mr. and Mrs. Emmett Tucker are entertaining Emmett's uncle from Polk county and they're having some trouble providing him a place where he can sleep. He's always been used to a big feather bed and can't seem to get adjusted to the mattress which Mrs. Tucker fixed for him.
They heard him up the first night,
and when they asked was anything wrong, he said there wasn't, only he had to get up to rest.

Mrs. Ed Thomas broke her string of beads in the Gem theater Saturday night at an exciting place in the picture and Ed had to keep a firm grip on his self control while he hunted around on the floor in the dark for the beads that spilled off.

Attorney Parks is scheduled to make a talk before the Woman's Discussion club next Wednesday on what the trouble in China is all about. But at this writing it looks like maybe he'll have to be sick or called out of town that day for he can't seem to learn what the difficulty is or why.

Mrs. Millie Hicks had to rush down to the telephone exchange yesterday to answer a long distance call from her married daughter that lives in the city. But by the time she got there the hurry and the excitement had taken her breath so that she couldn't talk until she calmed herself a while.

Sidney Moon gave one of his coats to old Cap Bowers last week on account of Cap was nearly out of anything to wear. And the first time
Cap wore the coat outside he met Sidney's bull dog, and seemed like the dog recognized the coat, for he followed along and growled so that Cap had to go over and get Sidney to let the dog know it was all right.

Jeff Patton, who has the agency for a patent washing machine, gave out word recently that he'd demonstrate the machine by doing a washing for anybody that would call him and he got his hands full right away.
But he stuck to it until some of the folks called him to come and demonstrate some more on their second week's washing, after which he changed his rules.

Some comment was made lately about how slow Henry Hunt talks and seems like he turns every word over a few times in his mind before he lets it out. And Uncle Bill Bobbitt remarked that if some others would slow down their talk and mingle in a little thought, why their conversation would carry more weight.

It's been noticed around town that two or three people who bought automobiles without thinking much in advance of the first payment, are now walking again.

MERELY WANTED TO KNOW DINER'S IDEA

Sam Jones was once very late in arriving at a certain town where he was to make an address, and had to rush through a hasty dinner before he could go before the waiting audience.

"W-w-what will y-y-you have?" asked the stammering waiter, slowly and deliberately.

"Dinner! Dinner! Anything! But hurry up and be quick!"

"Will you have some sou-sou-soup, sir?"

"Soup!" exclaimed Sam Jones, rush- ing his fingers through his hair. "Yes, soup—anything!"

"Will you have some r-r-roast beef, sir?"

"Yes—yes—yes! But trot it on!"

"And m-m-macaroni, sir?"

"Thundering, yes! Now git!"

"I w-want to ask you one more ques- que-question, sir?"

"Out with it, then?" exclaimed Sam, pounding the table with his fist.

"Well, sir, I wa-wa-want to ask you, sir, if you c-c-come here to eat or to ha-ha-have a f-f-fit?"—Exchange.

The Nicely Bobbed "Barbara Bobbs"

By DOROTHY DOUGLAS

(Copyright.)

HENRY VYNER rumbled his fair hair in vain. No hint of an in- spiration came to his brain—it seemed temporarily drained of all plots and he was under contract to the Argus to turn out another mystery story be- fore another sun had set over his at- tle window.

Henry began to wish he had taken up brick laying as a profession. Per- haps it tired the muscles but certainly there would be none of that devastat- ing brain fog that besets the over- worked writer of fiction. And, not least in consideration, there would be the regular weekly check of goodly proportions coming in to help pay for having old suits pressed and shabby hats reblocked.

Then, out of that fog-bound Intel- lect Henry found himself looking at a girl's face—a face so contorted by the frantic effort she was making to find a vital spot in her throat with a pair of ghastly sharp scissors that Henry wasn't sure whether or not she was even good-looking. The face was reflected in a small mirror that hung in the light of his window for the pur- pose of assisting the daily shave.

Henry took a swift survey of the windows of the flats opposite and yes—there in the window just across the court he could see the girl in her aw- ful effort to stab herself successfully with those murderous scissors.

Would he be in time?

Henry sprinted down the stairs, dashed to the apartment door round the corner, flung himself up the four flights of stairs and rang the bell with a loud peal that might have awakened the fire brigade itself.

He stood waiting then with his heart pounding.

He breathed a sigh of relief, for within the apartment he heard foot- steps approaching the door. And to Henry's now vivid imagination he fancied the footsteps dragged as if the girl were uncertain as to whether she would answer the summons or continue her determination to end it all.

Henry braced himself as he heard the door being opened. The girl night, in her fevered, unstrung state of mind attempt to bury those blades in his own flesh by mistake.

She opened the door and stood gazing wide-eyed at her imperious door-bell ringer. Certainly she looked distraught and she still clutched the scissors in her right hand while with the other she endeavored to push back the half head of long hair that hung across her shoulder.

"What is it? Is the house on fire or something?" she swiftly inquired of the troubled looking young man at her door.

"No—er—nothing like that—I sim- ply thought you were trying to do away with yourself with those scis- sors. I saw you from my window making such frantic efforts to find your jugular vein or whatever vein it is that runs through the throat that—I dashed across to save you." Henry stood gazing at the girl who now— with her face set into normal lines gave him a great sense of pleasure.

"Me—why that's the very last thing in the world I'd think of doing. It's a pretty jolly old world to be alive and kicking in, I think." Then she burst into laughter so merry that Henry was forced to join her.

"Then why the awful efforts with those?" he indicated the scissors.

She stopped laughing long enough to answer him. "I was merely bob- bing my hair—rather trying to, and I have made pretty much of a mess of it—I've been hacking away trying to see the back of my head for nearly half an hour. I loathe going to hair- dressers—that's the reason I've put up with long hair when nearly the en- tire world is bobbed."

Henry gazed at the hair in question and a smile grew in his eyes. "You certainly are making rather a mess of it—looks a bit choppy—I have a hunch I could improve on your work so you would be at least presentable."

Joyce stood doubtfully gazing at Henry, needing his proffered assist- ance badly and refilling in her heart that since he had made such a frantic effort to save the life of a complete stranger—he must be a right sort of chap. Besides, Joyce had a queer little feeling that she would grow to like Henry Vyner—his eyes were so blue and honest and mirth- ful.

She opened the door wider and Henry stepped inside her dainty little flat. Once inside they looked at each other and burst into laughter. Cer- tainly they presented a funny picture.

If there is one emotion that sends two persons straightway into the bonds of friendship it's wholesome laughter, and Joyce and Henry as- surely entered by that door.

"And now to work," said Henry taking the great scissors from her hands, "you can't go about half shorn any longer. Sit in that chair in a good light, and if you are satisfied with the bob I give you you are going to sign a contract to let me do it al- ways. In the meantime I have found an idea for a story which I shall call 'Barbara Bobbs,' and when I've sent it away this afternoon you must meet me and have dinner—somewhere."

"If you bob me nicely—I will," Joyce smiled sweetly up at Henry.

"You will be bobbed more than nice- ly," said Henry, and knew that the little God of inspiration had come to him in love.

PLAIN CITY WINNER OVER CIRCLEVILLE

Exciting Game of Baseball
Lost to Eagle Team by Close Score of 1 to 0.

A week ago when one run would have been a ball game for Circleville, they made eighteen, Sunday when two runs would have won, they could not make one to tie, and so dropped the contest to Plain City by a count of 1 to 0.

All the scoring of the game was soon over. Plain City led off and Jackson came thru with a hit and after Rapp had filed to center Near was given the only free pass of the game off Kanavel. Both men ad- vanced while Terry was retiring Nesser on his slow grounder and then Albanese poked one just off, first that put Jackson over with the only run of the game.

From that time forward Kanavel was complete master of the situation and Plain City never again presented a serious threat, but as far as re- sult went the game was history after that first half inning.

Circleville kept fighting every inch of the way and had men on bases in almost every inning, but could not drive a run across. Griffith was very stingy with safe hits; al- lowing only five in five different in- nings, but he contributed from bases on balls and hit one batter and was in trouble in almost every inning. In the eighth the locals had the bases clogged with only one down, but a force at the plate and a pop fly re- tired the side.

The Circleville team looked like a big league outfit in their new gray suits, which they wore Sunday for the first time.

Manager Hott has trimmed his squad down to war strength of a dozen men and it looked as tho we have a team that will be in the fight thruout the season.

On next Sunday we play our first out of town game at Reynoldsburg and a large crowd of fans is expect- ed to make the trip.

Despite the unfavorable weather Sunday a good sized crowd enjoyed the game.

Score by innings:—

1 2 3 4 5 6 7 8 9 —T

Circleville . . 0 0 0 0 0 0 0 0 0 — 0

Stolen bases—Jackson 2; sacrifice hits, Miller, Terry, Adams; struck-out by Kanavel 11; by Griffith 5;

bases on balls, off Kanavel 1, off

Griffith 4; hit by pitcher, Schall. Umpire, Hayes.

Sam, a Neighbor of His

Last summer at a West side daily vacation Bible school, the pastor told the children the story of Samuel and his mother. The next day, in review- ing the story, he asked a small boy who Samuel's mother was. Bob scratched his head for a moment, looked puzzled, then answered:

"Well, they used to live next door to us, but I can't think at all what Sam's mother's name was!"—Indian-

AMUSEMENTS

Buster Keaton has taken his frozen face into the prize ring. At least, he masquerades as a pugilist, gets him- self involved in a peck of trouble and finally has to fight the world's champion. And what a fight it is!

The famous comedian's hilarious venture into the realms of fistiana forms the basis of the plot of "Bat- tling Butler," Keaton's latest pic- ture now showing at the Met theater. Heralded at Buster's crowing achieve- ment in laugh provoking, "Battling Butler" is living up to its promise by convulsing audiences at every per- formance.

"Battling Butler" is different; it has as absorbing plot and is invested with elaborate settings that would do credit to the biggest cast, includ- ing captivating Sally O'Neil, Snitz Edwards, Tow Wilson, Francis Mc- Donald, Mary O'Brien, Eddie Bordon and Buddy Fine is excellent.

The comedy gives Buster the op- portunity to again show his versatili- ty. He portrays a rich young idler who falls in love and then has to pose as a prize fighter in order to win the girl, whose family believes him to be weakling because of his fine clothes, valet and luxurious sur- roundings. The comedian takes the name of "Battling Butler," but when the real "Battler" appears on the scene, Buster finds himself hopelessly tangled in the web of deception. How he finally triumphs and whips the champion in a vicious battle that makes the fight in the original "Spoilers" look like a petting party, provides a sensational climax in which thrills vie with mirthful mo- ments.

"Battling Butler" was produced by Joseph M. Schenck for Metro-Gold- wyn release.

How Do You Choose Shoes?

Do you select shoes which will be smart and becoming and entirely suited to your needs?—or simply because they happen to be the newest fad?

In a season when so many styles are brought forth, it is very wise to choose your shoes for definite purposes, or to wear with certain costumes. For, after all, being "well dressed" depends upon your own attractive- ness. And clothes, or shoes chosen in that way, will al- ways give greater pleasure.

RADIO SAVES LIVES OF CREW IN STORMReceives Warning, Then Cooks Meal for Men.

New York.—Capt. John Hall and six seamen from the three-masted schooner G. J. Cherry, wrecked off Cape Hatteras in the hurricane of March 2, attributes the fact that he and his crew were saved to two things: The first, a modern radio set with a metallic box and secondly, to 443,000 feet of lumber the ship was bringing from Charleston S. C., to New York.

Late in the day of March 1, Captain Hall, tuning in with the broadcast set he had purchased only last November, heard a storm warning from the Richmond Hill station WABC.

Richmond Hill was right, and the storm came with such violence that it opened the seams of the ship and for 13 days he and the crew clung desperately to the after-deckhouse of a ship two-thirds submerged by water, diving to the lazaret in the after hatch for raw potatoes and catching fish with a hook improvised from the springs on the schooner's auxiliary gas engine, which was thrown overboard with every other removable object to keep the ship from going under. The lumber cargo kept the boat afloat. The radio set was quite forgotten in the struggle to keep alive!

Not Seen by Passing Ships.

The story of seven ships, sighted by the watch in the mizenmast cross trees, which passed without noticing the signals of distress during the 13 days until Captain Hall and his crew were at last picked up by the oil tanker Gulf Point, has been told, but the part a metal cabinet of the radio set played was merely suggested in the original accounts of the rescue.

The G. J. Cherry's galley was, of course, submerged and the raw potatoes salvaged and the fish caught had to be cooked, so Captain Hall, remembering the metal box, sent a negro sailor down to salvage it from his under-water cabin.

"Castiron Bill," the ship's seventy-seven-year-old cook, and "the only American among the crew," according to Captain Hall, had a man dive into the schooner's galley for a grate from the stove.

It was easy to find fuel—there was a lumber cargo. They also had the food. What was needed now was a vessel to do the cooking in.

It may have hurt the new radio fan which the captain had turned into to tear out the coils, condensers, sockets and tubes from the metal frame of the receiver. But this was done, and soon the odor of sizzling sausages, 13 fish, and a few meager potatoes heartened the crew again.

"So even after the storm warning we used the set," explained "Castiron Bill."

Potatoes Gave Out.

On the eighth day adrift the potatoes gave out and the fish would no longer bite, and "Castiron Bill" took to light cooking—four sausages a day for seven men.

It was a bad day all around. The fourth steamer had passed within five miles without sighting them, and the crew voted six to one against the captain to take to the single lifeboat the G. J. Cherry carried.

"Three hundred miles to land," said the captain, "and they wanted to row it. Childish. Would have been suicide."

"Why didn't they mutiny?" he was asked.

"Well, I persuaded them, I guess," said the weatherbeaten "old man" of the ship, who has been a master of sailing vessels for 35 years.

Kentucky Town ClaimsThree Singing Mice

Mayfield, Ky.—Mayfield claims three singing mice. Oscar Boaz reports he has heard one of these rodents about his house which makes a noise not unlike a "sort of song." Henry Singleton is accredited with catching one of these "singing" mice a few months ago, and another has been heard giving its merry lay about his premises recently.

On the other hand, while these musical mice are sought as curiosities, reports are sent out from the Kentucky agricultural experiment station of injury by mice to fruit trees, loss running rather high in various parts of the state. One orchard owner reported the loss of 75 fourteen-year-old trees, and fruit growers in practically every section of the state have suffered losses from ravages of mice.

High water in lowlands caused mice to migrate to higher grounds, with the result that many orchards have suffered exceptionally large mouse injury this year, according to W. W. Magill, extension field agent of the college of agriculture. The flood waters destroyed the natural source of stored feed for the mice and forced them to eat bark of the fruit trees, according to Magill.

"BEST FOR THE LEAST"

Lack of Hospitality Toward "Poteen" King

Accused of manufacturing "poteen," the famous Irish moonshine, the king of the bootleggers of the Galway region was sentenced recently to pay a fine of $50 or spend three months in the jail. On the day appointed for his choice he appeared at the gates of the prison and announced that he would serve his time, as he was unable to pay the fine.

He had not, however, complied with the rule of the prison to provide himself with a police escort and a committal warrant. Admittance to the prison was refused. The following day he again applied for admission, with the same result. Vowing that he would pay off the fine by distributing more of his troublesome "poteen," he turned away from the inhospitable prison and went back to Connemara.

Fruits With Meats and Vegetables

ON appetite depends the usefulness of every meal we eat—say our greatest dieticians. Fruit awakens the appetite. Its lovely color and fragrance are far more than a passing pleasure. They are essential, since our ability to absorb properly much of the food we eat depends on our quota of fruit. The present vogue is for fruits with meats and vegetables. Halves of large peaches and pears, slices of Hawaiian pineapple slightly sautéed, served with meats, and such vegetable dishes as pineapple with egg plant and scalloped sweet potatoes and apples have made their appearance in the dining rooms of famous hotels.

And since canned fruit is available at all seasons, since it is now packed with the flavor and health-giving properties of fresh-ripened fruit, and because it is economical, it is widely used in these new dishes. Hawaiian pineapple is not only a tart and savory addition to meat, but its juices have been recommended by physicians as a special aid in the digestion of meats. Crushed pineapple is effectively used as a meat sauce, just as apple or cranberry sauce is used with meat. Bartlett pears, packed in a syrup that preserves their delicacy, aroma and flavor, are especially good with meats and fish.

First American Flags Displayed in Warfare

It is perhaps little known that the first American flag displayed "at sea" was raised by Colonel Wynkoop, commander of the Royal Savage, one of Benedict Arnold's little fleet in Lake Champlain, in 1776. This flag was a replica of the first striped flag, hoisted over Washington's headquarters at Cambridge. It consisted of thirteen alternate red and white stripes in the field and retained the colors of England, the united crosses of St. George and St. Andrew on a blue ground, in the canton. This flag was known in England as "The Rebellious Stripes." "A picturesque incident is told of the first Stars and Stripes used in a military engagement," said Mr. Ames, foremost flag manufacturer in the country. "The Revolutionary flag of thirteen stripes with a circle of thirteen stars was adopted by the Continental congress on June 14, 1777, but the statute was not officially promulgated until the third of the following September. Meanwhile a copy of an Albany newspaper describing the flag had fallen under the eye of a Continental officer from Massachusetts on his way with reinforcements to Fort Schuyler, formerly Fort Stanwix, where the city of Rome, N. Y., now stands.

"He arrived at 5 p. m. on August 2, and very opportunely, too, as it turned out. For the British attacked the fort the following morning, which was Sunday. Before the end of the day the garrison had run up the first American battle flag. White stripes from shirts and hospital bandages alternated with red stripes made from the scarlet petticoat of a soldier's wife. A blue canton was improvised from the military coat of one Capt. Abraham Swartout, who, a year later, wrote to the commander of the fort requesting 'an order on the commissary to supply me, as promised, with eight yards of broadcloth in lieu of my blue coat which was used for colors at Fort Schuyler.'"—Everybody's Magazine.

HIGHEST LEVEL

In Constructions Costs For Two Years Was Reached in March, 1927.

Washington, April 23.—Construction costs rose during March, reaching the highest level they have occupied in two years. The average of these costs last month was slightly more than twice as great as the average registered in 1913, according to statistics compiled by the Associated General Contractors of America.

March was the third successive month to witness an increase. The latest rise was the most definite upward movement noted within any single month since early in 1923.

The increase is ascribed to higher prices of the basic construction materials. The average of material prices last month was the greatest since July, 1925.

The average of wages paid by contractors in the principal construction centers of the country during March showed no change from the figure recorded for February, when a slight rise over the January average was noted.

Gauged by a scale which places the 1913 average at 100 as its basis, construction costs as a whole reached the 201 level in March. At no time during the nineteen preceding months had the 200 mark been topped.

Last month's average was four points above the figure recorded for March, 1926. It was virtually equal to the March, 1925, average.

Sells Anything From Cougars to Grizzlies

Morton, Wash.—Any grizzly bears today, or would you like a real live cougar, bobcat or soft-eyed black-tailed deer? Small game, birds of any kind always on hand. Thus does Victor Winner—well named for his adopted job—advertise his wares about the country.

Winner lives on the south slope of Mount Rainier, where long protection has tamed the wild animals and birds until a little coaxing and offer of food is the lure to get them within the deceptive trap. He supplies many zoos and private parks with wild life specimens each year only by going out into his back lot and holding communion with the denizens of the forests.

Winner is a product of the early pioneer days when he trapped, herded cattle and prospected for gold. He declares tourists are gradually taming wild animals by scattering food here and there as they camp. The wild life learns to seek the human travelers, knowing something tasty is liable to remain for their benefit.

Men's Hair Long

Bobbed hair and truncated tresses may be popular in America and Europe, but the mode has not penetrated Asiatic Russia. Even the men in some parts of Turkestan wear long hair. In the "Heavenly Mountains" of Turkestan the Kalmucks, who are pure Buddhists, wear their hair in long, thick braids. They live in felt tents, eat mutton and drink "douniss." Baldness is practically unknown among them.

The shot will melt but the cardboard will not burn.—Farm Journal.

Deadly Disease Spreader

The common housefly is found in practically every portion of the globe. They deposit their eggs upon some putrifying matter, and the larvae are hatched under favorable conditions within 24 hours, and become full-grown within three or four weeks. The common housefly is a most dangerous agent in the spread of disease.

RAILROAD RIGHT OF WAY IS HIVE OF BUSY WORKERS

Construction Has Been a Race With Time, Weather And Floods As the Whirr And Clank of Machinery Has Told of the Energy Being Expended on Ohio's Major Piece of Railroad Building—Chesapeake & Ohio Expects To Be In Operation In This City In September.

Ohio's only major piece of railroad building is now being rushed toward completion in the southeastern portion of the state, between Gregg and thru this city to Valley Crossing, a distance of sixty-three miles.

At many places, gangs of workmen are employed in the construction of a double track railroad which is to bridge the gap between the Chesapeake & Ohio railway, on the south, and its subsidiary, property, the Hocking Valley, on the north.

Since last November, when the work was started, it has been a race between time, weather and floods, and, now, with the advent of milder weather, the new roadway begins to take tangible form all along the countryside. Before the end of September, according to the schedule formulated for this work, the new road will be ready for operation, and once again, the many small agricultural villages that have been alive with the tramp of two thousand workers, the whirr and clank of machinery and the rumble of huge caterpillar tractors, will resume their wonted peacefulness.

For a number of years, despite increasing demand of its own traffic, the Norfolk & Western has permitted use of its rails between Waverly and Valley Crossing for accommodation of the heavy interchange movement between the C. & O. and the Hocking Valley. The new construction, therefore, is expected not only to facilitate the C. & O. and Hocking Valley interchange, but also to ease the situation for the N. & W. which urgently requires exclusive use of its rails for its own large traffic.

In the interest of speedy completion of the new link, the crews of seven general contractors have been distributed in eight sections thruout the area of construction, which is dotted with field camps for housing and feeding employees. The latter are working on ten hour shifts, day and night. Included in the mobile equipment of the contractors are 58 steam shovels, 63 locomotives and 533 railroad cars.

This machinery rolls into new location daily in the van of the bridge builders and track layers, who have before them the task of excavating 5,500,000 yards of dirt and rock, erecting 18,500,000 pounds of structural steel, of pouring 120,000 cubic yards of concrete, and laying 400,000 ties and 20,000 tons of the heaviest type of steel rail. In preparation for actual laying of track and finishing of bridges, 50 concrete plants have been established and five material yards have been situated at convenient points along the route.

This railroad link, when completed, will give the C. & O. and Hocking Valley resemble in outline an easy roadway between the Atlantic seaboard on the one hand and the Great Lakes on the other. Pictured on the map, along with this connecting line of road, the C. & O. and Hocking Valley resemble in outline and easy curving "L," extending almost due south from Toledo to the Ohio river and thence eastward to Hampton Roads.

Engineers point out that this Gregg-Valley Crossing route is not only one of directness, but is one of low grades and easy curvatures. At no point over the 63 miles of roadway will there be a grade exceeding five-tenths percent against the eastbound or empty movement, while the ruling grade against loaded traffic will be two-tenths per cent. Indeed, the grade is hardly perceptible to the eye.

There will be no grade crossings, since the new roadway passes under or over intersecting highways and railways.

Generally following a water level grade, the route runs between the Scioto river on the west and a low range of foothills on the east. It skirts the so-called "valley of floods," and, at all times, will be above the spring flood levels. The country thru which the new line is being built is old Indian territory. The Scioto tribes had villages there and cultivated the soil after their primitive fashion. Early white settlers took up the work in a more scientific manner and thru succeeding generations this locality has been known as "Ohio's Garden Spot," because of the character of the agricultural development there.

Toward the southern end of the construction, there looms to the east Mount Logan, under the shadow of which "The Great Seal of the State of Ohio" was fashioned in 1803.

The Great Seal of the State of Ohio has been altered several times since its introduction in 1803 when Governor Tiffin visioned "the sun rising on a new state." The original setting of this seal is now undergoing a change. The latest designers are not artists wielding palette and brush, but railway construction engineers directing transit and level along the foothills of Mount Logan, which is the central feature of Ohio's official emblem.

"Down-staters" watching progress of the building of this railroad have noted the coincidental location of the line across the countryside depicted in the state seal. They point to the new line as imparting a modern note to this rural setting and as bringing transportation into the picture, where it ought to be, in the foreground, along with agriculture, which is represented on the seal by a sheaf of wheat. The new line of road represents the largest railroad construction in Ohio during a period of a decade or so.

PROSPECTOR WINS IN RACE FOR GOLD

Dog Team Beats Motor Bus in Dash for Claim.

Winnipeg, Man.—Probably there is no spectacle which will stir the emotional impulses of a community to a greater extent than a race, and when the race is for gold the tension is heightened. That is why this city still is talking of the sensational race to file ownership on a gold claim on new ground at Slate lake, north of here, between Mickey Gilleran, an independent prospector and William Todd, the representative of a wealthy mining company.

Following the strike Gilleran and Todd started for Winnipeg to obtain papers necessary to enable them to stake additional ground close to their claims. The race to the city was even, and the papers in their possession, the men retraced their steps for the final dash to the rich dirt.

Both men got away from Winnipeg at the same time and on the same train, but Gilleran stopped off at a wayside station when the train stopped for a moment and telephoned ahead to have a dog team in readiness when the end of steel was reached. At this place Todd took passage on a motorbus which operated for several miles, but Gilleran drove his dog team all night and passed the bus unnoticed in the darkness.

When his dog team tired as a result of being pushed to the limit, Gilleran halted 28 miles from his destination and sent the team back. He covered the remaining distance on foot.

On arrival at the site of the claims Gilleran staked them in his name and started back to Winnipeg to record them. On the return trip he met Todd and his party, who thought they had left him far behind. Disgusted at being bested in a race he thought he had won by a wide margin, Todd concealed his chagrin and congratulated the winner.

Gold Bars Vary

There is no standard size for bars of gold. The smallest made by the mints is the five-ounce bar, which contains about $100 worth of gold. The largest made is about the size of a building block, about 400 ounces.

Wanted to Be Asked Once More

By H. LOUIS RAYBOLD

(Copyright.)

IT IS not very pleasant to be the only girl in your crowd that isn't either married or engaged. Marion Gray sometimes felt philosophical about the matter when she looked about her and saw the sort of husbands, present or prospective, which her friends had chosen. She herself could have had Jack Rogers any day if she had not preferred to wait for a taller, handsomer, richer man.

It isn't to be wondered at that Marion read with great interest the following item in the Brainerd Sun:

"We hear that the new building on the corner of Main and Winter streets has been leased to the firm of Caldwell & Scoble, rising young architects, who will live, we understand, at Mrs. Weatherby's, so it seemed a foregone conclusion that there were two young bachelors coming to town. And as Mrs. Weatherby lived just across the street, Marion could not help but see them occasionally.

She saw them—from a distance—the very night they arrived. Both were presentable enough, but young Caldwell seemed to be the better looking. He walked with an air and his clothes were the last word in cut, ease and color.

In the days which followed, the small town of Brainerd fairly laid itself out to please the newcomers. They got considerable business and a great deal of entertainment. There were even those who said it was ridiculous the way people fell all over two ordinary fellows.

"Personally," said Jack Rogers one evening to Marion as they set on the upper veranda step watching the moon rise—or at least Jack thought that was why they were sitting there. "I'm suspicious of people who come from goodness knows where. For all we know, they may be a couple of crooks!"

Marion almost choked with indignation. "You're absurd, Jack!" she cried.

"Especially that Caldwell guy," grumbled Jack. "Isn't he the mama's boy! And there he is now, swinging his cane! And, by gosh, I do believe he's coming here!"

If Jack could only have known how big a favor his departure would have been to Marion, he would not have known whether to please her by going or punish her by staying.

As it was, he withdrew into a shell of reserve and heard Marion putting herself out to be agreeable to a stranger as she had never exerted herself to be agreeable to him.

And while he watched and listened, he evolved a scheme whereby, if Caldwell & Scoble were crooks, the fact should be uncovered. Nor is it going too far to say that he devoutly hoped they would indeed prove to be crooks. He had long been in love with Marion and was quite ready to go to any lengths to win her.

Before young Caldwell was even thinking of going home, Jack had risen and bade both of them a cool good night.

On the following morning Marion heard from various sources that Jack had left town, although he seemed to have told no one where he was going. For the first time in her life Marion's thoughts concerned themselves with his whereabouts.

A week passed and he did not return. During his absence Marion was frequently seen with Caldwell and her crowd got considerable kick out of wondering if he were really in love with her.

Marion herself wondered, too. She felt that she would say "yes," if he did ask her to marry him. Strangely, however, Jack with his mysterious absence had done more to advance his interests than he ever had with his presence. There were actually moments when Marion found herself weighing the two men and thinking that the scales tipped very little one way or the other.

Two weeks later Jack returned, as quietly as he had gone away.

He went straight to Marion. And had he not felt so miserable himself, he might have noticed that she looked—well, different, somehow.

As it was, he sank down in the couch beside her and waited a moment, as if wondering just how to put what he was about to say.

Then, "I suppose I might as well get it off my chest," he began. "I've been tracing this Caldwell & Scoble firm from one town to another. They've certainly been around a lot. But I had no luck. That is—well, you see, if you were going to marry young Caldwell, I wanted to make sure before hand he was all straight and would make you happy. And I guess he is. Couldn't find a thing about either of them that wasn't O. K. So, if you love him, that's all there is to it."

Marion folded her slender hands about her knees. "That was kind of you, Jack," she said with a smile. "But you needn't have bothered. Mr. Caldwell told me last night he's engaged to Doris Scoble, his partner's sister."

Jack sighed with tremendous relief. "Thank heaven," he said. "Then we're just where we were before."

"Are we?" asked Marion with a laugh. "Oh, Jack, you old faithful, ask me to marry you just once more!"

Joseph W. Adkins,
 14julyd&wtf. Probate Court.

Somebody has written in to inquire how certain people in town make a living and seemed like they were hinting at the writer in particular. And personally we'll say that being busy with other things we've never put a great deal of thought on that subject and don't feel competent to discuss it at this writing.

Luther Newton, who has been working on the streets for the last week or two got a right hard fall yesterday when his shovel slipped out from under him.

Milton Hall meant to go on a fishing trip down on Willow creek today but postponed it on account of a lack of equipment. He's got a good outfit and he knows where it is, but so many things have been piled on top of it in the closet where he kept it, that he can't get up the heart to start digging for it.

Simon Sloan went up to the city last week to take an examination for a postoffice job. He came out thinking he had made a high grade, but since then he's found that he guessed wrong on the biggest part of the questions.

Mr. and Mrs. Emmett Tucker are entertaining Emmett's uncle from Polk county and they're having some trouble providing him a place where he can sleep. He's always been used to a big feather bed and can't seem to get adjusted to the mattress which Mrs. Tucker fixed for him. They heard him up the first night, and when they asked was anything wrong, he said there wasn't, only he had to get up to rest.

Mrs. Ed Thomas broke her string of beads in the Gem theater Saturday night at an exciting place in the picture and Ed had to keep a firm grip on his self control while he hunted around on the floor in the dark for the beads that spilled off.

Attorney Parks is scheduled to make a talk before the Woman's Discussion club next Wednesday on what the trouble in China is all about. But at this writing it looks like maybe he'll have to be sick or called out of town that day for he can't seem to learn what the difficulty is or why.

Mrs. Millie Hicks had to rush down to the telephone exchange yesterday to answer a long distance call from her married daughter that lives in the city. But by the time she got there the hurry and the excitement had taken her breath so that she couldn't talk until she calmed herself a while.

Sidney Moon gave one of his coats to old Cap Bowers last week on account of Cap was nearly out of anything to wear. And the first time Cap wore the coat outside he met Sidney's bull dog, and seemed like the dog recognized the coat, for he followed along and growled so that Cap had to go over and get Sidney to let the dog know it was all right.

Jeff Patton, who has the agency for a patent washing machine, gave out word recently that he'd demonstrate the machine by doing a washing for anybody that would call him and he got his hands full right away. But he stuck to it until some of the folks called him to come and demonstrate some more on their second week's washing, after which he changed his rules.

Some comment was made lately about how slow Henry Hunt talks and seems like he turns every word over a few times in his mind before he lets it out. And Uncle Bill Bobbitt remarked that if some others would slow down their talk and mangle in a little thought, why their conversation would carry more weight.

It's been noticed around town that two or three people who bought automobiles without thinking much in advance of the first payment, are now walking again.

Changing His Tune

Bobbie, like most little boys, had been told that Santa Claus remembers only the good little boys and girls, so he tried to be good before Christmas. While visiting his grandmother he forgot for a second and started crying. As he opened the door grandmother said:

"Santa Claus, just listen to this little boy cry."

The crying stopped instantly as Bobbie exclaimed:

"Shut the door, grandmother; I'm not crying. I'm laughing."—Indianapolis News.

RADIO SAVES LIVES OF CREW IN STORMReceives Warning, Then Cooks Meal for Men.

New York.—Capt. John Hall and six seamen from the three-masted schooner G. J. Cherry, wrecked off Cape Hatteras in the hurricane of March 2, attributes the fact that he and his crew were saved to two things: The first, a modern radio set with a metallic box and secondly, to 443,000 feet of lumber the ship was bringing from Charleston S. C. to New York.

Late in the day of March 1, Captain Hall, tuning in with the broadcast set he had purchased only last November, heard a storm warning from the Richmond Hill station WABC.

Richmond Hill was right, and the storm came with such violence that it opened the seams of the ship and for 13 days he and the crew clung desperately to the after-deckhouse of a ship two-thirds submerged by water, diving to the lazaret in the after hatch for raw potatoes and catching fish with a hook improvised from the springs on the schooner's auxiliary gas engine, which was thrown overboard with every other removable object to keep the ship from going under. The lumber cargo kept the boat afloat. The radio set was quite forgotten in the struggle to keep alive!

Not Seen by Passing Ships.
The story of seven ships, sighted by the watch in the mizenmast cross trees, which passed without noticing the signals of distress during the 13 days until Captain Hall and his crew were at last picked up by the oil tanker Gulf Point, has been told, but the part a metal cabinet of the radio set played was merely suggested in the original accounts of the rescue.

The G. J. Cherry's galley was, of course, submerged and the raw potatoes salvaged and the fish caught had to be cooked, so Captain Hall, remembering the metal box, sent a negro sailor down to salvage it from his under-water cabin.

"Castiron Bill," the ship's seventy-seven-year-old cook, and "the only American among the crew," according to Captain Hall, had a man dive into the schooner's galley for a grate from the stove.

It was easy to find fuel—there was a lumber cargo. They also had the food. What was needed now was a vessel to do the cooking in.

It may have hurt the new radio fan which the captain had turned into to tear out the coils, condensers, sockets and tubes from the metal frame of the receiver. But this was done, and soon the odor of sizzling sausages, 13 fish, and a few meager potatoes heartened the crew again.

"So even after the storm warning we used the set," explained "Castiron Bill."

Potatoes Gave Out.
On the eighth day adrift the potatoes gave out and the fish would no longer bite, and "Castiron Bill" took to light cooking—four sausages a day for seven men.

It was a bad day all around. The fourth steamer had passed within five miles without sighting them, and the crew voted six to one against the captain to take to the single lifeboat the G. J. Cherry carried.

"Three hundred miles to land," said the captain, "and they wanted to row it. Childish. Would have been suicide."

"Why didn't they mutiny?" he was asked.

"Well, I persuaded them, I guess," said the weatherbeaten "old man" of the ship, who has been a master of sailing vessels for 35 years.

Kentucky Town Claims Three Singing Mice

Mayfield, Ky.—Mayfield claims three singing mice. Oscar Boaz reports he has heard one of these rodents about his house which makes a noise not unlike a "sort of song." Henry Singleton is accredited with catching one of these "singing" mice a few months ago, and another has been heard giving its merry lay about his premises recently.

On the other hand, while these musical mice are sought as curiosities, reports are sent out from the Kentucky agricultural experiment station of injury by mice to fruit trees, loss running rather high in various parts of the state. One orchard owner reported the loss of 75 fourteen-year-old trees, and fruit growers in practically every section of the state have suffered losses from ravages of mice.

High water in lowlands caused mice to migrate to higher grounds, with the result that many orchards have suffered exceptionally large mouse injury this year, according to W. W. Magill, extension field agent of the college of agriculture. The flood waters destroyed the natural source of stored feed for the mice and forced them to eat bark of the fruit trees, according to Magill.

Dogs Tricked

Shenandoah, Iowa.—Some one placed a supply of bones in an open freight car and, when all the surplus dogs of this town had gathered to the feast, locked the door and consigned the carload to Hamburg, Iowa.
